New at SAGE!

THE INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL FOR COMMUNICATION STUDIES

Editor Cees J Hamelink University of Amsterdam, The Netherlands

For over four decades, Gazette has published wide-ranging scholarly articles from the international community of communication scholars.

From February 1997 Gazette will be under the leadership of a new Editor, a new Editorial Advisory Board, and a new publisher, SAGE Publications and will now focus on:

• the role of communication in world politics and world trade and the contribution of communication to international understanding, peace and security
• the interaction between communication and development processes
• the legal, social and ethical implications of new information and communication technologies
• the theories and techniques of communication policy formation and communication planning
• the development of normative theories in the communications field under the conditions of cultural pluralism
• the implications of international human rights standards for the field of communications
