The African e-Journals Project has digitized full text of articles of eleven social science and humanities journals. This item is from the digital archive maintained by Michigan State University Library. Find more at: http://digital.lib.msu.edu/projects/africanjournals/

Available through a partnership with

Scroll down to read the article.
• Culture of Communication Research
• Management of Environmental Attitudes
• Future Communication Policies
• Multilingualism in Africa
• TV Broadcasting in Nigeria
Africa Media Review provides a forum for the study of communication theory, practice and policy in African countries. It is published thrice yearly by the ACCE Institute for Communication Development and Research, P.O. Box 47495, Nairobi, Kenya. Telephone 27043/722089/334244 Ext. 2068.

Correspondence and Advertising

Authors should send contributions to the Editor, ACCE Institute for Communication Development and Research, P.O. Box 47495, Nairobi, Kenya. Books for review, book review articles and all other matters regarding AMR should be addressed to the Publications Manager, same address as above.

Subscription Rates:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Duration</th>
<th>Rate</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>One Year</td>
<td>US$ 39.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Two Years</td>
<td>US$ 69.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Three Years</td>
<td>US$ 99.00</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

These rates include packing and postage.

Single copies are US$ 13.00. Cheques or money orders should be made payable to African Council on Communication Education and sent to the above address. Special arrangements will be entered into where applicable for subscribers in Africa through their nearest ACCE National Co-ordinator. ACCE institutional and individual members receive AMR as part of membership privileges.

Editor

Lewis Odhiambo, School of Journalism, University of Nairobi, Kenya.

Associate Editor

Faustin Yao, CERCOM, Université d'Abidjan, Cote d'Ivoire

Publications Manager

ACCE Executive Co-ordinator

Batilloi Warrity, African Council on Communication Education, Kenya

ACCE President

Tom Adaba, NTA TV College, Jos, Nigeria.
Volume 3 No. 1 of the AMR is a rich blend of studies in mass communication in Africa. As in past issues, the articles in this issue reflect the growing concern of African communication scholars for the development of critical and theoretical perspectives that would more aptly reflect the African communication reality.

Richard M'Bayo and Robert Nwako, for instance, outline some of the recurring issues in mass communication research and suggest ways in which African communication scholars might contribute to the global debates in the field. Evelyn Onyekwere, on the other hand, explores a message-based persuasion theory within the Nigerian cultural context and suggests that strategies based on coercion or sanction may result in more compliance behaviour than those based on explanation, need and circumvention. This argument has serious implications for policy makers and planners of change programmes and campaigns.

Des Wilson examines different aspects of the cultural context of communication and proposes the adoption of communication policies for Africa which recognize traditional communication systems and processes along with modern ones. He terms this a diachronic-synchronic view of communication. Rotimi Badejo looks at multilingualism in sub-Saharan Africa. He gives an overview of the language situation in a select group of African countries and then proceeds to investigate the place of multilingualism in education and mass communication. He finally proposes a model for classifying countries according to their levels of commitment to the use of African languages.

In 'The Advent and Growth of Television Broadcasting in Nigeria', Charles Umeh examines the political and educational motivations which led to the proliferation of the medium in Nigeria. He assesses the performance of educational television in the country and concludes that, by and large, it has been quite successful. In the final article in this issue, Dapo Adelugba reviews Wole Soyinka's film, Blues for a Prodigal, and hails it as an "innovative and courageous work" which reaffirms Soyinka as a keen observer of life.
Table of Contents

16. Culture, Persuasion and the Management of Environmental Attitudes by Evelyn C.C. Onyekwere

26. Towards a Diachromic-Synchronic View of Future Communication Policies in Africa by Des Wilson

40. Multilingualism in Sub-Saharan Africa by B. Rotimi Badejo

54. The Advent and Growth of Television Broadcasting in Nigeria: Its Political and Educational Overtones by Charles C. Umeh

67. Wole Soyinka's Blues for a Prodigal: A Review by Dapo Adelugba