The African e-Journals Project has digitized full text of articles of eleven social science and humanities journals. This item is from the digital archive maintained by Michigan State University Library. Find more at: http://digital.lib.msu.edu/projects/africanjournals/

Available through a partnership with

Scroll down to read the article.
Editorial

Child Labour and education: a study from south-eastern Zimbabwe
M.F.C. Bourdillon

Poverty alleviation with economic growth strategy:
Prospects and challenges in contemporary Nigeria
S.I. Oladeji and A.G. Abiola

Ethnicity and development in sub-Saharan Africa
Ndanga Noyoo

Food vending: Adaptation under difficult circumstances
Victor Ngonidzashe Muzvidziwa

We don't have to go to bed on phuthu alone:
A case of transformation in Colenso
Eleanor Wint and Thembi Ngcobo

The social practice of psychology and the social sciences in a liberal democratic society: An analysis of employment trends
M. Wilson, L. Richter, K. Durrheim, N. Surendorf and L. Asafo-Agei

The psychosocial effects of organized violence and torture: A pilot study comparing survivors and their neighbours in Zimbabwe
A. P. Reeler and J. Mhetura

Book reviews

Volume 15 No 2 2000
The Journal publishes analyses of social development issues as they affect the poor and marginalized in society. It deals especially but not exclusively with concerns relevant to southern Africa and is addressed to development and social workers, planners, policy makers and academics in a variety of fields such as economics, geography, politics, sociology, psychology, social administration.

Published twice annually, the Journal seeks to enhance understanding of the social development processes that contribute to the planning and implementation of appropriate intervention strategies at different levels. Its goal is to discover how best to target relevant and successful projects to those most in need and how to maximize popular participation, thereby creating egalitarian and productive communities.

Subscriptions per annum (2 issues per year)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Location</th>
<th>Subscription Price</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Zimbabwe</td>
<td>Z$40</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Developing world</td>
<td>US$30</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rest of world</td>
<td>US$40</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Please indicate starting issue or year for subscriptions. Back issues available on request. Agents discount 20%. Airmail surcharge US $8 per annum. Advertising rates on request, exchange advertising by arrangement.
NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

All postal correspondence should be sent to the Editor, Journal of Social Development in Africa, School of Social Work, P/Bag 66022 Kopje Harare Zimbabwe. Email correspondence should be sent to the Editor, JSDA at zimreview@mango.zw where it will be speedily dealt with.

MANUSCRIPTS

Contributions that further the aims of the journal are welcome. Manuscripts should ideally be submitted by E-mail or on a PC disk (in Word; Wordperfect or similar) together with a typed copy on single-sided A4 paper; double-spaced with large margins all round. The author's name, affiliation and address (including E-mail address) should be attached to the article, which should begin with a summary of less than 100 words. Essential footnotes should be typed consecutively at the end of the article.

REFERENCES WITHIN THE TEXT:
Within the body of the text use the Harvard or author: date style as follows:
We find that Makola (1982a:67) argues the view taken by Nkomo (1981). Another study (Makola 1982b:21–26), however ...

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL REFERENCES
These follow the body of the text and should be listed alphabetically and chronologically by author and date as follows:
For books: Surname, initial. Date. Title, place, publisher. For journals, Author, initial. Date. Title. Journal name, (or collection or book in which this is a chapter), page numbers. More detailed examples can be posted or E-mailed on request. Studying the references in this journal may also be of assistance. Authors receive ten off-prints.

The submission of an article to this office implies that it has not been published already and neither is it being considered for publication elsewhere. Copyright of all contents of the journal is assigned to the School of Social Work, Harare. Permission to reprint original articles should be sought from the Editor the journal at the above address.
Contents

Editorial

Articles

- Child labour and education: a study from south-eastern Zimbabwe

  M.F.C. Bourdillon

- Poverty alleviation with economic growth strategy: Prospects and challenges in contemporary Nigeria

  S.I. Oladeji and A.G. Abiola

- Ethnicity and development in sub-Saharan Africa

  Ndanga Noyoo

- Food vending: Adaptation under difficult circumstances

  Victor Ngonidzashe Muzvidziwa

- We don’t have to go to bed on phuthu alone: A case of transformation in Colenso

  Eleanor Wint and Thembi Ngcobo

- The social practice of psychology and the social sciences in a liberal democratic society: An analysis of employment trends

  M. Wilson, L. Richter, K. Durrheim, N. Surendorf and L. Asafo-Agei

- The psychosocial effects of organized violence and torture: A pilot study comparing survivors and their neighbours in Zimbabwe

  A.P. Reeler and J. Mhetura

Book Reviews

Books Received
SUPPLEMENTARY PUBLICATIONS
OF THE JOURNAL OF SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT IN AFRICA

General

Research Unit Series
- "Student Health Services at the School of Social Work: A Survey." 1992. Researched & compiled by Stella Makanju & Johan Dhamba. US$6, Z$15 (This publication is free to students) (A4, 29 pp.)

Occasional Paper Series:

Subscription Agencies receive a 20% discount.
Tel: 263 4751815, 75296567 Fax: 263 4751003; e-mail ssw@etanet.zw
EDITORIAL

With the arrival of a new editor, changes are being made to the Journal of Social Development in Africa. These are intended to make the journal easier and more pleasant to read. They include changes to make the house style conform more closely to the Harvard or author-date style used for social science publications. Spelling is in the Oxford house style. Contributors are being asked to communicate with the editor by E-mail where possible and to submit their MSS in electronic form. We are using a PC format as is common in most parts of the English-speaking world. All these changes are designed to make the journal more professional and to speed up the process of refereeing, proofreading and editing.

Some of the changes that will be taking place are designed to take advantage of the arrival of the Internet to our continent. The point of an academic journal is to make research findings available to as wide an audience as possible. This editor believes that our primary audience consists of fellow Africans working in situations that are recognizably similar to each other in significant ways – one of which, of course, is our common legacy in recent history of colonialism and post colonialism. African scholars urgently need to find quick and easy ways of communication. For too long we have been cut off from each other by language barriers and poor postal services – to say nothing of the censorship and self-censorship that has made it difficult to share information and insights, even on an academic level. For too long has communication been limited by the situation in which African scholars find themselves, ranging from poor working and living conditions, inadequate libraries, teaching loads and demoralized students to a shortage of books and, in many countries, war, famine, disease and poverty. The conditions that keep people in poverty in Africa take their toll on scholars and intellectuals as well. Now at last a tool is available for making it possible for us to address fellow Africans and their concerns. By making our work relevant to ourselves we will make it relevant to those who live outside our continent.

Journals such as this one provide an ideal means of communication for scholars and we do not intend to abandon paper and the haphazard process of posting our journal to other countries. All the same we recognize the astonishing usefulness of the Internet. It is cheap, (given the original technology), quick and easy to use. We are therefore exploring ways of making the journal available on the Internet, while acknowledging that Africa is under-equipped in all means of mass communication.

A recent conference noted, for instance, that Africans have access to only two per cent of the world's telephone and, on average, one public telephone is available to 15 000 African users. The world average is one telephone to 600 users. Community radio networks are being installed but they are not available in all parts of Africa, especially where governments practice rigid control of the mass media. About 1.5 million Africans have access to the Internet. One million of these live in South Africa. This means that there is one Internet user for 1400 people on our continent, compared with a world average of one in 35 people and, in the West, one in three.

On the positive side, many African tertiary institutions are creating their own web sites and providing E-mail links for their faculty members. Three years ago only 12 countries in Africa had full Internet access. Now it is available in every capital city in Africa and several virtual universities have been established. As a result the primary target audience of this journal now has much greater access to the type of research we publish than it had three years ago.

Barriers, of course, remain. Internet provision is patchy. The new technology looks intimidating and too many of us are still prisoners of our own inhibitions – let alone our lack of typing skills. Yet this will change. A combination of electronic communication and traditional methods of publication will greatly enhance the spread and reputation of scholarship in Africa and may even help to speed up social development and the alleviation or elimination of poverty that is the main focus of this publication.

Carole Pearce
Editor