PUBLICATION GUIDELINES:
We ask contributors to submit two (2) typed copies, following the format (on such issues as references and notes) of articles in this issue of TRANSFORMATION. Whilst the journal will cater for work at any level of abstraction, or detail, a number of criteria will guide the editors in selection of material for inclusion. Articles should aim for academic rigour but also clarify the political implications of the issues discussed. We are concerned not to compete with other South African journals that may cover related ground but in different ways – this will govern our selection principles. All articles will be assessed anonymously by the referees. Contributions should preferably not exceed the following lengths:

- Analytical articles: 8 000 words
- Debates, comment and review articles: 3 000 words

Also see inside back cover 'Notes for Contributors'.

The views expressed in TRANSFORMATION do not necessarily reflect those of the editors.

High productivity now: a critical review of South Africa’s growth strategy

Nicoli Nattrass, characterises South Africa’s current economic policy as one resting on a high productivity strategy, a strategy that may not work and is unlikely to deliver jobs and social benefits.

Foreign aid and development debates in post-apartheid South Africa

Development debates have largely raged around state policy, the RDP and GEAR. Patrick Bond suggests, however, that a critical analysis of the role of foreign development aid to South Africa is apposite and important.

From symbolic to participatory reconciliation: race relations in South Africa — the African-Indian case

Recently African-Indian relations in South Africa have been the subject of some important symbolic attempts at mediation and melioration. Thokozani Xaba reviews the relationship and considers how it can be strengthened.

The political opposition in Botswana: the politics of factionalism and fragmentation

Bertha Z Osei-Hwedie looks at the state of democracy in Botswana. Botswana has long operated an effective multi-party system... but somehow the opposition never succeeds in winning power.
